CANTORUM CHOIR

ince its formation a little over six years ago, the Cantorum hoir has established itself as one of the finest choirs in he Thames Valley. It has grown from an original 14 to a ormal maximum of 26, although for tonight's performance it s augmented to a total of 34.

he Choir's concerts and engagements have ranged from small ummer soirees, large scale concerts involving full rchestra, to weekends at St. George's Chapel, services at wildford Cathedral, a recording in conjunction with the estminster Cathedral Choir of Christmas carols, a Royal lbert Hall concert in conjunction with the Alexandra Choir London), a film recording and most recently an appearance in the BBC "At Home on Sunday" series with Wendy Craig.

The Choir's repertoire range is broad, from Byrd, Tallis and 'alestrina to Bernstein, Horowitz and Rutter, although it has sended to specialise in the 20th century part song. The Choir has received two dedications from contemporary composers, and has premiered two carols and two part songs. It is hoping to premiere an anthem by Anthony Caesar, and a song cycle based on the poems of Sir John Betjemen is being written for it.

Future dates are looking very exciting — another Royal Albert Hall appearance on the 20th December, and in early 1988 the Choir is to be conducted by John Rutter in his setting of the Gloria, coupled with his new edition of the Faure Requiem. It is hoped that the Choir will be involved in the millenium celebrations of Holy Trinity Church, Cookham, fitting it in around other bookings which takes the Choir's concert plans through to 1989.

In this concert, as in all Cantorum Choir concerts, the soloists are all members of the Choir.

The Cantorum Choir is kindly sponsored by Pike, Smith & Kemp.

G F HANDEL - CHANDOS ANTHEM VI 'AS PANTS THE HART'

In 1717, Handel entered the service of the Earl of Carnarvon, later Duke of Chandos, and at this time he wrote the works which began to form his reputation as a composer, notably the masque Acis and Galatea and the Chandos Anthems. The works of this period are eclectic in style: Handel's cosmopolitan career had exposed him to the German Chorale, Italian sonata and English verse anthem. Elements of all these forms are in evidence in the sixth Chandos Anthem 'As Pants the Hart'.

The structure of this anthem is underpinned by the division of the text into six short movements. After an instrumental introduction, the solos and choruses are alternated to form a balanced overall shape. Different styles and textures are juxtaposed, leading the music forward to its dramatic culmination in a chorus on the word 'Alleluia'. This use of a fugal choral ending became very popular in later religious music.

As a mature composer, Handel returned to this work, and there are several re-writings of it, altered to suit the vocal and orchestral resources available at the time of each performance. Tonight's version seems to have been written in about 1719 for the choir of the Chapel Royal, and the male soloists (which in the Chapel Royal included both Altos) are named in the original manuscript. The 'Alleluia' was re-used in the oratorio 'Athalia' and the overall style of the work undoubtedly anticipates the mature works of Handel culminating in the triumphs of the 1740's and setting a corner-stone for the religious oratorio of the High Baroque.

W A MOZART - PIANO CONCERTO IN C K 467

Mozart's Piano Concerto in C K 467 the 'Elvira Madigan' was composed in the 1780's, a time when Mozart's career as a composer was reaching its peak. Earlier in his life, Mozart had been willing to experiment with his concerti, writing for unusual instruments or combinations of instruments. However, in the 1780's, he returned to his compositions for the piano; his innovations during these years were more fundamental as elements of Romanticism began to permeate this work.

The harmonic boldness and dramatic expression of this work undoubtedly owe something to Mozart's experience as a writer of Operas. These years saw the composition of such masterpieces as 'Don Giovanni' and 'Le Nozze di Figaro'. In this concerto there are passages where the lyricism of the melody seems theatrically powerful. As this work stands at the pinnacle of the Viennese Classical tradition, so it also anticipates the virtuosic playing and variety of expression of the nineteenth century romantics.

F J HAYDN - MASS NO 9 IN C 'PAUKENMESSE'

The 1790's were troubled times in Europe following the French revolution, and the title 'Paukenmesse' (Mass in time of war) gives an indication of the feelings of anxiety which permeated the composition. Despite the circumstances, this is essentially a work of hope; the ultimate conclusion of Haydn's strong religious faith is one of optimism. The Mass has moments of great energy and vigour as well as some of the most affecting passages of vocal music Haydn ever wrote.

During the 'Age of Reason' the Mass had been relatively unpopular, as its textural structure was unsuited to the sonata form which dominated European composition. Haydn did not allow the text to inhibit his writing, and by careful scoring and distribution of the musical argument between soloists and chorus, he achieved a coherent and solid piece. The impressive opening is ample evidence of the heights of writing achieved in this work; the consummation of a great career and the foundation of a new era of musical expression heralding the might of Beethoven's Missa Solemnis.
